Town wants out of Evergreen tourist zone

Drayton Valley is seeking to divorce itself from the Evergreen Tourist Association.

Town council last week voted to request membership in the Battle River tourist zone.

The decision follows months of lobbying by the chamber of commerce to gain entry into Battle River.

Chamber officials have said joining Battle River would be both financially and geographically beneficial to the town.

Earlier this year, Evergreen upped its per capita membership fees from 25 cents to $1, while Battle

River's rate remained at .15 cents.

The chamber also suggested an alignment with the Camrose-based association would better reflect the town's determination to attract Highway 22-bound tourists.

However, a possible snag in the town's decision may rest with Battle River itself.

The organization is on record as stating it would not accept Drayton Valley as a member until Evergreen gives its okay.

Ken Albrecht, president of Evergreen, said in a recent interview his organization is not currently willing to give its blessings to a Drayton Valley-Battle River union.

He expressed optimism that the town would eventually return to Evergreen's fold.

Mayor Bob Mayhew, who recommended a one-year trial marriage with the Battle River association, said he was not impressed with Evergreen's objectives.

Attending a recent meeting of that tourist zone in Stony Plain, Mayhew told council, "What they talked about was erecting signs at entrances to Evergreen...that was the only thing of interest that was mentioned, other than the brochure they put together."

While admitting the organization had matured greatly in the last few months, he added that "although their intentions are good, my recommendation is that an association with Evergreen is an exercise in futility."

Mayhew went on to suggest a joint town-chamber meeting to discuss the tourism potential of Drayton Valley.

Council agreed to send a letter to Evergreen informing it of the town's decision.

A one-year membership in the Battle River association will cost the town $750.

Clubs receive $100,000

Area agricultural societies have received $100,000 in grants from the provincial government.

Agriculture Minister Peter Elzinga and Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps announced last week that Drayton Valley, Breton, Buck Lake, Winfield and Alder Flats organizations were all receiving requisitions from the Western Canada Lottery Foundation.

The Drayton Valley and District Agricultural Society earned the biggest slice, with a $35,000 grant.

All other societies received $15,000.

The money, made available through an agreement between the Alberta government and the lottery corporation, is to be used by each society for the improvement or expansion of its programs or facilities.

Some 282 agricultural societies are eligible to share a total of $4.8 million available from the lottery corporation this year.

This is the second year of the three-year funding program. The 1987 allocations were jointly endorsed by Elzinga and Career Development and Employment Minister Rick Orman.

Alberta Agriculture oversees the operation of the province's agricultural societies, while Orman, as part of his portfolio is responsible for lotteries.

Under the funding structure, Class C fairs can receive $25,000, while Class D fairs are eligible for $15,000. The maximum grant available is $200,000 for Class A fairs.

The funds do not have to be matched and can be applied to any area of the agricultural society's operation, including debt retirement, programs, operations or capital improvements.

Cloud & rain

The Edmonton weather office is predicting cloudy weather and showers for the area throughout the week.

Tuesday's forecast is for temperatures reaching highs of 15 C and lows near 10 C. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will all mean more showers. Highs of 16 C and lows of 9 C are expected.

Town council will not be sitting as scheduled on Aug. 27.

Due to the summer holidays, council's next regular meeting will take place on Sept. 17.

The Mohawk service station is planning an expansion.

The service station will be enlarging both its gas bar and its convenience store.

The municipal planning commission recently approved of the development.

The town will install pre-cast parking curbs along 43rd Street in front of the Frank Maddock high school as a temporary solution to a flooding problem. The parking curbs will cost $1,000.

The recent smoke testing of the town's sewer system has yet to turn up any major problems.

So far, no cross-connections have been found, although some lines have collapsed.

A complete report should be finished sometime this week.

Thirty participants are ready to show off their skills at the Ramp and Roll skateboarding demonstration Friday at the arena.

The event is sponsored by the County of Parkland and will take place 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Two sections of the town's water main have now been flushed. It required 84,000 gallons of water to flush the test area and therefore the water plant has sufficient capacity to flush the entire system, town engineer Manjeet Saran says.

Cost of the flushing was $3,700. The town will spend $45,000 to complete the flushing and cleaning of the water main system.

The new Saan store should have its shelves stocked this week in preparation for its grand opening.

Resident transforms sorrow into poetry

By Megan Parker

Two days short of the anniversary of her husband's death Verlie Arnet sat and wrote a poem in his memory.

The poem, 'The Pain' ironically has just recently brought Arnet joy.

Written January 16, 1987, Arnet submitted her writing to the Great American Poetry Contest in late February and to her admitted surprise has received an award of merit and the Golden Poet Award for 1987 for her entry.

Of 5,000 total submissions just 125 received merit awards.

Arnet will spend Aug. 9-14 in Las Vegas collecting the golden poet trophy and taking part in a convention held by World of Poetry.

Arnet, who began writing poetry shortly after her husband's death couldn't believe her luck and says she was smiling for four days once news of her accomplishment reached her home near Moon Lake.

"It's been fantastic. I was tickled; when I got the letter (from the World of Poetry) I threw my arms up in the air and yelled whoopee," she exclaimed.

Times haven't always been this happy for Arnet. Her husband of 30 years, Chris, died January 18, 1986 at the age of 54.

"We were dancing at a (grogg) convention," she explained. "He had a blood clot right in his heart and died on the dance floor."

Arnet had no choice but to pick up the pieces and carry on with the chore of maintaining the family's 960 acre farm.

Arnet and daughter Dallas, one of six children, with the help of brother Trone and many friends and neighbors put in long hours first learning how and then putting into practice the everyday vigil of running the farm.

The help Arnet received prompted her to write a poem expressing heartfelt gratitude. The poem was read aloud by Arnet to 36 friends gathered at the family's home December 27 last year.

"We had been sad for so long...we needed it," Arnet explained, adding, "We always had something that day so why sacrifice it because of Chris dying."

Prior to boarding the plane Arnet was busy completing another poem which is to be entered and judged during her stay in Las Vegas. A first place finish would mean $15,000 American, 10 prizes of $1,000 are also available.

Minor hailstorm

Weather not detrimental to local farmers

By Steve Fletcher

Recent rainfall has put local farmers in good position for a successful harvest, says District Agriculturist Gerald Laarhuis.

Last week's drenching led rain levels to surpass the high precipitation rates of July 1986, he said.

The heavy rains did do some damage, including flattening crops in patches and accompanying winds blew over several light out-buildings.

A minor hailstorm in the area also caused limited destruction, but nothing like what occurred in the Calmar area — where crops were completely destroyed by thumbnail-sized hail.

Overall, Laarhuis said the rain has done more good than harm and predicted this season's yields "are going to be equal or slightly better than last year."

Hay is of better quality this year, with farmers a full seven-10 days ahead of last year, he added.

Swathing should begin at the end of August.

Despite this, the news is still grim financially for grain producers.

Laarhuis noted that grain prices are down by about 20 per cent over 1986, and in some cases are down even more substantially. Barley, for example, is now worth less than half of what it was three years ago.

Hay prices, however, have risen over last year.

The livestock sectors are also very strong. With grain costs so low, livestock producers are finding it much cheaper to feed their cattle.

Vehicles, heavy trucks

New bylaw aims at keeping streets clean

Drayton Valley's new Traffic Bylaw 86-07 includes two sections specifically designed to keep the town's streets as clean as possible says Bylaw Control Officer Dave Turner.

"There are occasions when vehicles, especially heavy trucks and equipment, deposit large quantities of mud on the streets," said Turner, adding, "If it is not cleaned up immediately, a grader must scrape the street before a sweeper can be used".

Section 4.5 of the bylaw states no person shall park a vehicle, deposit or allow to be deposited from any vehicle, any article that may result in mud, grease, oil or any item on a public highway, boulevard or sidewalk. A $15 penalty may be assessed.

Section 10.2 states no person shall place snow, ice, dirt, debris or other material removed from private property onto the highways or other public places of the town. Ignoring the bylaw could result in a $30 fine.

"We will be working with the residents and businesses of Drayton Valley, seeking their co-operation in keeping our streets as clean as possible," explained Turner.

The town has received compliments in the past regarding its appearance

Bannerman honored

Lex Bannerman, RCMP detachment commander, was saluted last Friday at a banquet at the golf course lounge.

Bannerman is being transferred to Morinville

The town, fellow of ficers, and the golf course each presented him plaques in honor of his service to the community over the last seven years.

Delegation says

Financial forecast for rec complex by end of August

A full financial picture of the planned arena/curling rink complex should be available by the end of this month, says a spokesman for the Community Centre Society.

Bruce Clemmer told town council last week the society has already raised $100,000 in funds for the facility, most of it from oil companies.

The society is committed to providing at least $200,000 for the arena, he said.

"I don't think our ideals have changed. Our objective is to go out and raise money—we're committed to paying for portions of the design and engineering work."

Clemmer, who is president of the Drayton Valley Curling Club, was speaking for a delegation from the Community Centre Society, which appeared before council to provide members with updated information on the society's activities.

He added the curling club must now vacate its present facility by June 1990. The government takes over title to the property at that time.

The society is hoping to Beehive Workshop expanding

The planned expansion of the Beehive Workshop got the go-ahead from the municipal planning commission recently.

The workshop plans to construct a new facility at 4951-41 Avenue. The present building, located on 50th Avenue, will be sold.

The planning commission, however, outlined several conditions before any development can take place, including the construction of a lane along the west-side of the property.

A public hearing on the necessary re-zoning for the project, held last week, received no written submissions of concern.

An adjacent landowner was in attendance but registered no objections to the proposal, town council heard at its last regular meeting.

Council passed a motion agreeing to the re-zoning. Councillor Tom McGee, who is vice-president of the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped, excused himself from the vote to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest.

Fined for narcotic

A Red Deer man was fined $500 (or 60 days) last week for the possession of a narcotic.

John Michael Williams pleaded guilty to possessing cannabis resin in Drayton Valley Provincial Court.

obtain donations of at least $400,000, but Clemmer said that, with the recent sale of the curling club property, the society would probably not have to touch any of the donated funds for two or three years.

Responsibility for the arena lies with the town. The town's plans for the new arena have been mothballed until after the formation of the Drayton Valley-centred municipal district.

Total cost of the dual facility has been estimated at $1,000,000. Clemmer said the curling club realizes now that it will probably have to start construction prior to the arena. Despite this, the society remains committed to the concept of some form of dual facility.

Members of the Lions and Kinsmen clubs were on hand to show their support for the community centre development.

Community Centre Society member Joe MacLellan told council the group is considering applying to the Canadian Jobs Strategy Plan (CJSP) for workers.

Through this program, community projects are subsidied by the federal government if unemployment workers are hired.

The society is meeting with a CJSP official in September.

Mayor Bob Mayhew told the delegation he has "never been so confused" in his life concerning the project, and described the arena and curling rink as "totally divorced entities."

Pedestrians cross at own risk

Intersections create traffic problems

One issue council has, to face, even if they don't want to, is traffic problems in town.

There are several very bad corners and it will get worse.

Three of the worst intersections in town, are all located on 50th Street. In no particular order, the Turbo corner, the Mayhew Motors corner and the Royal Bank corner.

The situation at Turbo isn't that bad in the summer, but once school resumes in September, that headache will return.

Parking and the wide turning lanes have a lot to do with the traffic congestion at Mayhew's corner. And, this will get worse, before it gets better, when a new convenience store/gas bar goes ahead at that intersection.

Of the three, the Royal Bank corner is the worst, because there's no lights. And when the new Sany's store opens with limited parking, look out.

The pedestrian overhead lights at the Turbo corner are not doing the job. Some pedestrians use them, many don't. And, a lot of drivers don't stop for people in the crosswalk.

Parking should be restricted around the corners at the Mayhew Motors intersection. That would help.

Some sort of light, enabling the traffic coming off 51st Avenue, onto 50th Street, might be considered. A left turn at that corner is next to impossible now.

If proper traffic lights were installed at Turbo and the Royal Bank corners, it would mean four in a row. And, the motorists certainly wouldn't like that.

But, anything would be better than the way it is now.

Golf cart hit twice

Some golfers appear always in a hurry

There can be a lot of hazards on the golf course.

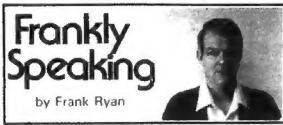

The obvious one's are the sand traps and water holes.

Then, there's the golfer who's always in a hurry. Some in carts, others on foot. All they want to do is hit the ball as often as they can, and as fast as they can, and if you're in the way...DUCK.

So far this season I've managed to duck a half dozen drives, while my son was struck on the leg and my golf cart has been hit twice.

It's been suggested that if you get hit by a flying golf ball, turn, and either drive it back to the owner, or, belt it into the bush. That might get the message across.

The most annoying golfers are the guys

Frankly Speaking

by Frank Ryan

who can't wait to get finished, so they can get to the bar. If people want to drink that bad, why are they on the course in the first place?

I don't have any trouble with a group renting the course and drinking. But, it should be STOPPED during public hours.

WAITING takes the fun out of the game. There's been times this year when we've waited up to 20 minutes for the group in front of us. If people are that slow, or they don't want to continue until they find the ball in the bush, they should show some etiquette and let others through.

Another frustration is the five player (?) foursomes sharing two putters.

And last, but not least, is the guy in the little red truck, who parks along the highway, and climbs over the fence looking for golf balls. Let him have the balls in the ditch, but what about a NO TRESPASSING SIGN on the course. Golfers loose lots of balls, and when we find one, that's an extra.

Golf ETIQUETTE is something everyone should practice. I know we all have to start, but why not do it right. And, keep doing it.

Office doors closing

The Hire a Student office will close its doors Wednesday, Aug. 12 as yet another summer nears the end.

Overall, student placements has gone well, according to Tracey Vatter of Hire a Student.

"All my students are working, and things are starting to slow down," she explained.

Job orders and placements will still be dealt with up to and including Wednesday says Vatter.

Over the summer months the Vatter has administered 182 job placements and received 161 registrations.

"The numbers are a bit deceiving," she said, adding some students aren't available or have found work elsewhere when contacted by the local Hire a Student office, while other students take on more than one job placement throughout the summer.

New books

The Lions Club received a shipment of new telephone books last week. The directories will be stored at the curling rink until everything is ready for distribution.

Airport applys for program

The Drayton Valley airport may soon be part of the province-sponsored Airport Vicinity Protection Area Program.

Town council last week directed administration to apply for the program, which controls the development of lands adjacent to the airport site.

"The AVPA program is specifically designed to minimize potential land use incompatibility by matching the airport with forms of surrounding development that complement the circumstances of the facility," AVPA director Rae Runge said in a letter to the Yellowhead Regional Planning Commission.

Provincial regulations include specifying land uses, height limitations, electronic facilities protection, and a referral process designed so that the safety and the function of the airport are not compromised.

The municipal planning commission, which was visited at a recent meeting by an AVPA official, has endorsed the program.

MPC Chairman Charlie Miner told town council that Alberta Municipal Affairs would draft the appropriate bylaw and conduct the required public hearings.

The AVPA was established by the province in 1971.

Esso station expanding

The municipal planning commission has agreed to a front-yard set-back relaxation of 14 feet for the Esso Petroleum office building.

The company is planning to add a 14-by-16-foot section to its building.

Town waits response

The town will wait for a response from the chamber of commerce before reviewing the business license bylaw.

At last week's regular meeting, town council was informed by administration that six written submissions had been obtained and an additional 15 telephone calls dealing with the bylaw were received. All phone callers were asked for written recommendations.

The town had earlier advertised for responses from local businessmen concerning possible revisions of the present policy.

Town manager Manny Deol told council that once the chamber has responded, administration will compile all data determining whether any revisions should be made.

Response high

Wednesday's Child a success

Six children have found new homes and four others await the same future because of the 1986/87 Wednesday's Child television segment.

CFRN-TV and Alberta Social Services' Edmonton region co-sponsor the program, operating since October 1981, to highlight children with special needs who require adoptive homes.

This year's season featured 32 children in the department's care on the Wednesday evening CFRN-TV news. Some were physically or mentally disabled, some with brothers and sisters who did not wish to be separated, some were of an older age.

Eighty-one responses were received because of the program airing, says Anne McAthey, Wednesday's Child coordinator for the Edmonton region of Alberta Social Services.

Only one child or sibling group is featured each week, but McAthey says the spin-off effects produce some encouraging results for other children awaiting a home.

"When 10-year-old Tanya was featured, 23 families responded. One family was matched with Tanya, and three other families were matched with other children who need similar adoptive homes. Three additional families are being considered for matching with other children."

McAthey says the program invites viewers to write to Box 866, Edmonton, Alberta T5J 2L6. If they are interested in pursuing the adoption of a special needs child.

The letter is referred to the appropriate district office of Alberta Social Services and followed up by a local social worker with a home visit to the family.

Then comes the job of matching children's needs with families' skills and talents.

Martineau says CFRN-TV in Edmonton finances all filming, production and on-air costs as a public service.

"Their dedication and enthusiasm to this project is commendable. It's not just another show to the staff involved with Wednesday's Child," Marg Pullishy produces the show.

Further information on Wednesday's Child may be obtained by writing to Wednesday's Child, Box 866, Edmonton, Alberta T5J 2L6. The show resumes in the fall.

License plates

Olympic souvenirs

Inquiries about Olympic licence plates have come few and far between according to Valerie Mulligan of the local Motor Vehicles Branch.

"There hasn't been that great a demand for them...not at the price," she explained.

Information and application forms for the $35 plates sporting the Olympic symbol have been available since April.

The Olympic souvenirs do not replace the vehicle owner's present plates or the owner's regular yearly registration fee she said.

The plates temporarily replace the front licence plate only and are valid until March 31, 1988.

A portion of the sale dollars for the collector plates will go to the Olympic committee in support of athletes visiting the 1988 winter games she said.

Unlike personal licence plates the Motor Vehicles Branch does not distribute the plates (which are only available through the mail, therefore Mulligan did not have information on exact sales, just customer inquiries.

The 19th Hole

Golfers

By Frank Pavlick
Canada's Sports Poet

The golfing season brings with it,
A certain change of air,
Non-golfers don't smell anything.
But golfers know it's there,
This air is tinted putty
green,
With little balls of white,
Long distance isn't telephones,
It's rubber rolls in flight.

A golfer's eyes instinctively
Will do a funny thing,
Just light up automatically
With any sign of spring.
They're all the same who play this game,
Though each may have a style,
A hole in one is worth man's soul,
And makes his birth worthwhile.

Scorekeepers play golf
very well,
And something else, it's found,
A golfer in the clubhouse seems
To play a better round.
Quite younger players often miss,
What older players saw,
Whoever youngsters play golf with,
Can pinpoint every flaw.

With sometimes Lady
Luck in hand,
Sometimes a little booze, There's more manure upon a course,
Than groundkeepers can use.
Golfitis itch, a true disease,
That makes each golf club
yearn,
To once more help a human hand,
Get out and take its turn.

Birchwood Village Greens will be holding its open house on the weekend.

The open house will include guided tours and a free refreshments. A scale model of the completed resort will also be on display.

Birchwood, located in Lindale, is a 640-acre site recently taken over by Bucar Realty of Calgary.
The facility will one day include a leisure centre highlighted by a heated indoor swimming pool.

Outfitting business too unpredictable

By Steve Fletcher
Wildwood outfitter Charlie Stricker is in the enviable position of possessing 2,000 square miles of prime British Columbia wilderness.
Well, almost.

Although he doesn't own it, Stricker, 49, was allotted the area, situated about 300 miles north of Prince George, as his own domain for guiding and outfitting clients — American and European tourists who pay good money for a chance to bug big game in Canada.

He has held the license
since 1981.

A life-long outdoorsman, Stricker said he started his outfitting business in 1984 because he enjoyed hunting and decided here was work that would allow him to hunt and get paid for it.

He estimates 75 per cent of his current clientele is from the United States, with the remainder coming chiefly from overseas.

Despite all the glamor surrounding his work, Stricker acknowledges this is balanced by its exacting costs.

To obtain the B.C. license, he shelled out $125,000 to the former outfitter in the area. Added to this are the outfitter's license, the royalty payments on each animal killed, and the annual lease arrangements with the provincial government.

The outfitter also works in Alberta. In fact, for the past two decades Stricker's most faithful client has been making annual pilgrimages into this province's woods in search of white-tailed deer.

Most of his clients, he admits, are big-business types.

Tourism

Buffalo jump

Alberta Culture opened a $10 million interpretive centre in July at one of the oldest and best preserved buffalo jumps in the world.

Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump Interpretive Centre, near Fort Macleod, tells the story of how the Plains people hunted buffalo for more than 5,400 years before the arrival of horses and guns — by driving herds of the animals over the cliffs.

UNESCO acknowledged this remarkable adaptation of a culture to its environment by naming Head-Smashed-In a World Heritage Site in 1981.

The new interpretive centre brings the era colorfully to life through displays, films, and guided walks above and below the 306-metre-long cliff.

The new seven-tiered sandstone colored building has been virtually carved into the hillside and the roof covered by soil to harmonize with the environment.
Elevators take visitors to the top of the cliff and a nearby viewpoint, and to its base, where the butchering of buffalo took place.

— although occasionally
those from other walks of life save their money in order to participate in the ultimate, albeit expensive, hunting holiday.

"They're really good people, really fine folks," said Stricker. "Most are experienced in hunting—often they've been in areas overpopulated or ruined — so they have a lot of respect for the environment."

Stricker concedes,
however, that the average hunter of today is different from his predecessors of 20 years ago.

"Hunting has changed a lot. It's much faster-paced."

He added many are no longer content "hunting (just) to be hunting" but instead have placed more importance on what they take in the field.

"They attach a dollar (price) to what they get. If they pay $3,000 (for the trip) and get a bull moose, they figure the trip has been a success," Stricker said.

Although his hunting parties usually get what they're looking for, Stricker makes no guarantee.

The nature of the outfitting business is just too unpredictable, he said.

A case in point is the time in 1966 when he "almost cashed it in" during a sheep-hunting expedition in the Cadmium area.

"I took a spill down the side of mountain," Stricker said nonchalantly.

The "spill" was actually a quarter-mile fall that ended in a shoot of rocks near the bottom. With all the ligaments torn in both legs, the outfitter managed to walk 1 1/2 miles to his horse and then rode another 10 miles to his truck.

He was bruised and battered and spent six weeks on crutches.

After experiences like these, Stricker's thoughts return to northern B.C.

"It's all mountain country. Occasionally we go above the treeline. At the top of 7,400-foot peaks you can see for miles."

Stricker organizes about nine hunting trips a year.

Agriculture display

'If you eat, you're involved' — ag theme

Alberta Agriculture's new information display is earning good reviews as it makes the rounds to fairs and trade shows this summer and fall.

Sharon Abbot, display coordinator says general response from the thousands who have visited the 10-by-30-foot floor display has been positive.

The display which was recently in Grande Cache and Olds, wrapped up visits to Stettler and a 10-day showing at Klondike Days in Edmonton. It began its summer tour at the Calgary Stampede in early July. It was featured at several fairs and special events in August and continues into November.

The display message is aimed at an urban audience, reinforcing the fact that agriculture is everyone's business. The display theme is "If you eat you are involved in agriculture."

Market report

On offer at Sekura Auctions for Wednesday, Aug. 6 were 113 head of livestock; too few feeder cattle to quote.

Medium type cows with calves at foot $900 to $1100 per set, some higher.

Good butcher cows $54 to $59 per 100, some higher.

Good bulls $68 to $71 per 100, some higher.

Medium type milk cows traded around the $700 mark.

Good light feeder hogs $40 to $58 per head.

If life begins at 40, what is it that ends at 39?

Jim Peabody

Agriculture Minister Peter Elisinga and Associate Minister Shirley Cripps at Alberta Agriculture display at Klondike Days in Edmonton.

Abbott says the message is delivered through large color photos and key information panels. Also there is a video message from Agriculture Minister Peter Elisinga and Associate Minister Shirley Cripps discussing the role of agriculture in the province.

"We have found that most visitors to the display are aware of agricultural issues and appreciate the problems farmers are facing today," says Abbott.

The display graphics and video deals with five areas: importance of agriculture to the economy; Alberta farm products; feeding the world; challenges in farming; and the government's commitment to agriculture.

The coordinator says people are often surprised by the extent agriculture affects their lives and at the range of food products grown and processed in Alberta.

The public is also invited to fill out a contest questionnaire, with the answers gleaned from information provided in the booth. Draws were made in Calgary and Edmonton for a farm vacation for a family of four, while in each of the other centres, a draw will be made for a $50 food hamper.

"The display is attractive and presents the information well," says Abbott. "We have had a number of requests from people wanting more information or wanting a copy of the video."

The booth is manned by Alberta Agriculture staff members, including many specialists who are available to answer questions.

The agriculture display will be at the Drayton Valley Trade Fair Aug. 21-22; Spruce Meadows Sept. 9-14; and Edmonton Northlands Fair Nov. 5-14.

Abbott says for more information on agriculture displays the public can contact information services division in Edmonton at 427-2127.

Safety hike

Between 2,000 and 3,000 Alberta farm families were estimated to have taken a hike around their properties recently to check safety awareness.

Responding to the first Farm Safety Hike organized by the Women of Uniform and Alberta Agriculture's farm safety program, producers and their families took a self-guided tour of their homes and farm buildings.

Jacqueline Galloway of Fort Saskatchewan, promotions co-ordinator for Women of Uniform says the purpose of the safety hike was to draw attention to some of the hazards that do exist on the farm. It also allowed farmers an opportunity to check their ability to deal with an emergency.

Alberta Associate Agriculture Minister Shirley Cripps was among those taking the farm safety hike as a kickoff to National Farm Safety Week.

Cripps and several guests at her farm near Winfield, southwest of Edmonton, followed the guide through the different areas of inspection.

The associate minister, who had earlier encouraged Alberta farm families to get involved, said the hike provided a good opportunity to check "safety points we should be aware of. It also helps farm families detect any areas where safety measures can be improved."

The safety hike was guided by a booklet which contained a 12-point checklist of safety aspects around the house, barn, fuel-storage area, shop, farm yard, grain storage facilities, wells and dugouts, chemical storage area, machinery, livestock, the garden and even the family members.

The farm family was to follow through the guide, making a physical inspection of the sites listed, and check-off "yes" or "no" answers about their state of preparedness. As each stage was completed a family member was to color in a section of a chart showing the progress of the tour.

The completed chart should now be sent to a Women of Uniform member. The family will then receive a magnetic plaque recognizing their participation.

August 31 is the deadline for farm families to submit their colored art work for the plaques. Alberta Agriculture district offices can provide names of area Women of Uniform representatives.

Children want to feel good, look good...

Dress for success. If you look good, you feel good. Clothes make the man. Or woman. Or child.

Your child, be she two or 12, probably has a favorite outfit she loves to wear and wear. Children are not unlike adults when it comes to clothing: they want to feel good and look good in their clothes. And they usually want some say in what they wear.

How can you cater to your child's emerging sense of self and style and stay within your budget?

The surest way to waste money is to buy something that won't be worn. Let your child have a say in what he wears. Shop with him, not for him.

Talk first, buy later

Before you go out and buy, talk about clothes with your son or daughter. What will you be looking for on the shopping trip? Talk about fashion and fad, classic clothes versus trendy. Decide together if you can afford trends and designer labels. Maybe you will agree to buy one trendy shirt or pair of pants. Set a price limit and stick to it.

What's already in the closet? Look at the clothes already in the closet. What fits? What items could be altered to make them fit? Can a hem be let down? Can a long sleeve that's too short be shortened or rolled up to become a just-right short sleeve? How about cutting the sleeves right off? Can a ruffle be added at the bottom of a too-short skirt? Can a seam allowance be let out on a pair of pants that are too snug? Use your imagination. Working together, you may recycle a good part of an old wardrobe.

Maybe your child is just tired of the same old clothes. Talk about how she could mix and match, add a scarf or a vest, take away a collar or a cuff and jazz up the old wardrobe.

Check out big brother's or sister's castoffs. Maybe you can make some creative additions to the clothes closet without spending a cent!

The shopping trip

Go shopping with your child. Encourage him to try things on. Buy clothes with room for growth. Look for features like raglan sleeves and elasticized waists.

Tightly woven or knit fabrics will wear longer and retain their shape better than loosely woven ones. Teach your child to read fibre content and fabric care labels. That way she will learn what she likes and what wears and washes well.

Retail survey

The chamber's retail survey organizer, Robert Wolff, says things are going fairly well. The survey began last week and is tentatively set to be completed on August 14. The survey is examining the purchasing habits of local residents. About 1,000 copies of the survey will be filled out. Pictured are Wolff and his two assistants.

Encourage your child to choose coordinates and make several outfits out of a few pieces of clothing.

Shop around. Check more than one store. Look for sales but don't buy anything just because it's a "good buy." It won't be a good buy if no one will wear it.

Don't forget second-hand stores. There you will find other people's mistakes, often almost brand-new. You will also run into well-made items that have survived one or more wearers and will probably survive yours too.

Dean Tuftin

Home from Pueblo

By Megan Parker
 Drayton Valley's Dean Tuftin and partner Jimmy Gunsch arrived home with 11th place overall in team roping following the National High School Rodeo Finals in Pueblo, Colorado.

The event is known as the biggest rodeo and sees over 3,200 contestants from two provinces and 36 states compete, says Tuftin.

With more than 140 teams competing in record breaking temperatures of 110 F Tuftin says he's somewhat disappointed with the duo's finish, describing it as "not that bad, but not that great either."

 Partner Gunsch of Thorsby fared well in calf roping with a fifth place finish and $300 scholarship. He was named the rodeo's rookie of the year.

The Alberta team finished in 11th place out of the 38 teams and received the championship in steer wrestling and reserve championship in break-way roping he said.

Back in Alberta Tuftin says he'll compete in a few Wild Rose Association rodeos and Central Alberta Jackpots held by the Team Roping Association before going back to school in September.

There will be an organization meeting on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19 at 8:30 P.M. at the Elks Committee Room.

RCMP are still investigating this accident near the intersection of 50th Street and 50th Avenue. The collision occurred outside the Western Review building.

Mixing alcohol and cars deadly

A noteworthy fact is that about 50 per cent of fatal collisions and 25-30 per cent of injury collisions are alcohol related. Motor vehicle collisions are the leading cause of death and serious injury for Canadians ages one to 84.

Both alcohol and motor vehicles pervade our society and although the independent use of either is acceptable to most adult Canadians, their combined use is not because the effect is often tragic. While we can protect our children from many other potential hazards or directly supervise certain activities, it is neither practical nor desirable to prevent their interaction with the traffic environment or to provide continuous supervision. Traffic safety is, therefore, an essential element in life skills education for children and young adults.

A recent study conducted by Health and Welfare Canada regarding substance use among Canada's youth between 12 and 29 revealed the following information:

- 87 per cent of the group studied, reported smoking cigarettes daily
- 39 per cent reported the incidence of alcohol use in the preceding week
- 21 per cent reported using marijuana during the year
- overall, 9 per cent reported smoking cigarettes daily, drinking alcohol weekly and using marijuana monthly.
- Canadians between 12 and 29 perceive the major risk associated with tobacco use to be lung cancer; for alcohol, it is the danger of driving; for marijuana, it is the harm to unborn babies. (Health promotion - Winter 1986, Health and Welfare Canada.

From February to June of 1986, workshops were held across the country in 17 major cities to present the national and provincial/territorial findings of the Canada Health Attitudes and Behaviour Survey; 9, 12 and 15 year olds (Health and Welfare Canada).

The collective thinking of the over 900 workshop participants resulted in a number of recommendations regarding the examination and implementation of alcohol and drug programs in school curricula. Recommendations included giving priority to both integrated substance abuse programs and traffic accident prevention in educating the school age population.

Bill 727-2435

Foreclosures rising

More than five farms a week abandoned by families

"In every single week of 1986, an average of more than 15 farm families left their farms."

"And if anything, that number will rise over the coming year."

"This is an intolerable drain of talent, expertise and knowledge. The effect on the future of the agriculture industry in Alberta and the rural communities it supports will be devastating."

"Any government — regardless of its political stripe — should recognize this serious problem and work tirelessly to deal with it in an effective way."

New Democrat Official Opposition Agriculture Critic Derek Fox moved first reading of Bill 278, Family Farm Protection Act.

The bill is modelled very closely on an act adopted last year by the government of Manitoba. It would place at the disposal of the government a number of alternatives for preventing debt-induced farm leaveings ranging from the striking of mediation panels, to requiring the leave of a court to commence an action arising from an instrument of indebtedness against a farmer, to the dedication of full-fledged moratoria against actions of repossession of farm land, farm equipment and machinery, and farm livestock.

"We must stop the exodus from our farms," said Fox in presenting the bill. He noted the Family Farm Protection Act is only one of a series of initiatives brought forward by the New Democrats as a result of their task force inquiry into the family farm and the future of rural Alberta.

He cited figures from the Alberta Agricultural Development Corporation (AADC) which showed that, in the 1985-87 fiscal year, 282 AADC clients left their farms. AADC is also projecting that between 250 and 300 clients will leave their farms in the 1987-88 fiscal year.

"This amounts to an average of more than five farms a week being abandoned — another farm every weekday. And it's just among AADC clients," said Fox.

This problem is further aggravated by the fact that the federal Farm Credit Corporation's moratorium on farm foreclosures has been lifted, and already more than 80 Alberta farmers have received foreclosure notices. Because of its moratorium, the FCC did not move against any of its delinquent accounts in Alberta last year. But there are between 400 and 500 such accounts in Alberta, and it is expected the FCC will move against many of them within the next two to three years.

"In other words, in the absence of effective provincial government action, the loss to our provincial economy of many of our young, well-trained and well-educated farmers will continue without any change or let-up."

Only a government incapable of grasping the simplest economic truths would allow this.

Student exchange program 'unforgettable experience'

Canadian secondary school students now have a unique opportunity to discover a new country while continuing their education thanks to the exchange program of Interculture Canada.

Interculture Canada, a leading international exchange organization, offers youths between 15 and 18 years of age the chance to study in more than 30 countries around the world. There are departures in summer or in winter depending on the country chosen. The program lasts 11 to 12 months.

"It's an unforgettable experience," said Andrew, who is back from a year in France. "I had a terrific time with my host family and made a lot of new friends. I discovered France and its culture by living with its people. Now I also speak French fluently."

In addition to the intercultural learning, the exchange program of Interculture Canada encourages the personal growth and development of teenagers. "My daughter has returned home with more self-confidence and radiant with happiness. She shows more openness, flexibility and responsibility," says the mother of a returnee from Venezuela.

Students interested in obtaining more information about Interculture Canada programs may call 1-800-361-1879 or write to 59 St-Jacques Str., Suite 700, Montreal, Que. H2Y 1K9. Final applications must be received by Oct. 30 for winter departure and Nov. 30 for summer departures.

Past history

This old combine is a stoic reminder of this area's recent past. The combine rests at the entrance of Dr. John Hunter's acreage in Rocky Rapids.

The Notebook

By Const. B. Herrick

On different occasions, I have noticed that for whatever reason, some people carry more than one driver's licence with them.

The main reason given for this is they lost their original driver's licence, applied for a new one, and then found the first one.

Whatever the reason is, no one shall have more than one driver's licence. In the above case, the original should be forwarded to the Motor Vehicle's Department for the province, as this is the driver's licence being replaced.

Section 24(3) of the Motor Vehicle Administration Act states that no one may possess more than one operator's licence, which carries a voluntary penalty of $50.

To pay for stamp

Took 2.99 minutes

How do you compare the cost of mailing a letter from country to country, and from year to year?

Currency differences and the pace of inflation make it difficult.

The best yardstick is relating it to the time the average person has to work to earn the price of a stamp. Thirty years ago in Canada, when the rate for mailing a letter was four cents, it took the average worker 2.99 minutes to earn this amount.

ERCB report

Two minor blowouts

The performance of crown drilling gas and oil wells in Alberta during 1986 was consistent with the record established over the past three years.

With some 4600 wells drilled in 1986, there were two minor blowouts, those being in shallow oil sand areas. The Energy Resources Conservation Board's (ERCB) 1986 Oil and Gas Well Blowout Report, issued last week, says that control of both the oil sands wells was regained within 24 hours.

Additionally, there were 16 cases where uncontrolled flows occurred during operations at producing wells. Of the 16 blowouts, four occurred at oil sands wells, two at conventional oil wells, and 10 at gas wells. Two of these uncontrolled flows resulted in the release of sour gas — one at a producing oil well, and one at a producing gas well. Control was regained within seven hours in both cases.

The August 1986 Lac Mineral sweet well blowout, near Edson, that killed two men, is not included in this report as this incident is still under investigation.

During 1986, ERCB staff conducted a total of 1960 drilling rig inspections, as compared to 1647 last year — a decrease of 19 per cent, primarily caused by the overall reduction in drilling activity. Of total 1986 inspections, 256 rigs were found to be "unsatisfactory" (13 per cent), as compared to 566 in 1985 (33 per cent). Of the 256 inspections shown as "unsatisfactory" only 162 were considered serious (eight per cent), as compared to 327 last year (13 per cent).

ERCB inspectors conducted 190 inspections at rigs drilling a total of 34 critical sour wells during 1986. No blowouts occurred at any of these operations. Of the total critical well inspections, only two were unsatisfactory and one was serious. By comparison, 88 inspections were conducted during 1985, at rigs drilling a total of 32 critical sour wells and, in two of these inspections, unsatisfactory conditions were reported. Neither was serious.

Fined for drunken driving

A Drayton Valley resident pleaded guilty to driving over the .08 mg blood alcohol limit and was fined $600 (or 60 days).

Kevin Neal Dean appeared in Drayton Valley Provincial Court last week.

The court also prohibited him from driving for a period of six months.

Study identifies 34 tourism improvements for area

Alberta Tourism has released the results of the Game Country Tourism Destination Area Study.

The study identifies 34 opportunities for developing and improving the tourism industry, including a recommendation the area be designated as 'Alberta's Game Country - Gateway to the Alaska Highway.'

Game Country is located in the northwestern part of the province, extending from the town of Whitecourt in the southeast to the village of Hythe and the British Columbia border in the northwest. The major highway corridor, which functions as a vital linkage in the Alaska Highway system, is identified in the study as Game Country's greatest asset.

The study noted that in 1982 there were an estimated 258,000 overnight visitors to Game Country who spent about $5.4 million in the zone.

The strategy developed in the study recognizes the absence of a zone tourism association for Game Country at this time and the importance of the municipalities collectively providing the organization required for tourism development.

According to the study, the majority of residents in Game Country are interested in the economic diversification which tourism can offer. The study reveals that many of the opportunities available to increase tourism can be achieved with relatively small investments. These include the development of interpretive centres, bed and breakfast operations, hiking trails, and the marketing of locally-made souvenirs.

The study was initiated in August 1985 by the Edmonton-based firm DMC Management Consultants Inc., in association with Whyte, Reynolds and Associates, Beak Associates Consulting Ltd., and Settlement Surveys Ltd. Funding for the $75,000 study was provided through the Canada/Alberta Tourism Agreement.

Tourism planning information and assistance is available from the planning section of the Department of Tourism in Edmonton.

Future tourist attraction?

Rare population of herons nest annually

Photos and story by Steve Fletcher

Chip Lake, long a popular ice-fishing destination, may someday attract binocular-clad tourists to its shores.

A current regional tourism study being undertaken by HLA Consultants of Edmonton argues that the large, shallow lake located near Wildwood has the potential to develop tourism because of its significant existing waterfowl population.

The call for the development of tourism in the area coincides with Alberta Fish and Wildlife's plans to expend considerable effort at improving habitat on and around the lake.

One of the largest lakes in the Eastern Slopes region, Chip Lake's cluster of islands has naturally attracted roughly 25,000 waterfowl. The island, wildlife officers say, are particularly popular to the birds because the most-like vegetation bordering many of the islands keeps predators — including humans — at a safe distance.

Chief among its latent attractions is the rare population of blue herons that come to nest annually on one of the islands.

The remarkable looking Family fish on the Lobstick River, near the Chip Lake outlet. Inset, sign at park entrance.

heron, a large bird identified by its long legs, neck and bill, numbered roughly 40 pairs last season.

Duane Fleming, a wildlife officer based in Evansburg, says recent discussions have focused on developing an interpretive trail and viewing area adjacent to the heron colony.

In the meantime, fish and wildlife officials in conjunction with the Wildwood Fish and Game club plan to continue this year with vegetation-burning on several of Chip Lake's islands.

The burning will take place this autumn, and is targeted at improving the nesting possibilities of the islands, says Fleming.

Island brush-burning started up two years ago, and the populations of birds either nesting or staging (resting on their southward journey) at the lake continue to rise, including a significant seagull colony.

What lies under the water has also caught the interest of fish and wildlife scientists.

In 1982 and '83, officials stocked the six-by 10-mile lake with 50,000 perch.

Fisheries biologist Carl Hunt says the outcome of this fish enhancement project won't be known for a number of years.

"It depends on the survival and regeneration (rates)," he said.

Chip Lake is riddled with excessive winter kill due to its relatively low oxygen levels.

Pike is the species indigenous to the lake. Hunt explained the commercial fishing of pike was active in the past as it was used to supply food to mink ranches in the area. When the bottom fell out of the mink industry, so did commercial fishing on the lake.

Nevertheless, sport fishing is booming, particularly during the months of February and March, noted Hunt.

Ice-fishing "is really significant on the lake, with a high catch per unit effort...about 20,000-30,000 pounds of fish are caught during those two months."

Hunt added that access to Chip Lake, especially when attempting to launch a boat, is still a difficult thing to accomplish.

At the northwest end of the lake, access is particularly bad. And during the winter months, with its swampy shoreline, entering the lake can be abominable.

However, this characteristic may indeed be a key factor behind the lake's natural bountifulness.

"From a waterfowl standpoint this (lack of access) may be desirable," Hunt said.

Fish and Wildlife officer Duane Fleming guides boat around Chip Lake.

Large seagull colony nests on one of the islands.

Treat canners with respect — don't use shortcuts

Every vegetable except tomatoes, every meat, every seafood that is canned at home must be canned in a pressure canner for optimum safety. Dangerous spoilage can live through even a long boiling water bath at 100 C (212 F) in containers of low acid food (pH of 4.5 or higher), but they are killed by higher temperatures that can be reached only in a pressure canner.

Pressure canners are usually made of cast aluminum and come in sizes according to loose contents capacity. The most popular sizes are 11 litre (actually holding 7 quart jars) and 18 litre (holding 7 quart jars and two layers of pint size jars).

Pressure canners can be quite expensive but they do their job for years and years. All you have to do is take good care of them and keeping their sealing rings/gaskets, pressure gauges, vents and safety valves clean and in good working condition.

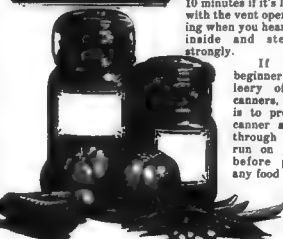

If you plant a large garden or are able to get a lot of fresh produce cheaply in season, it may make economic sense to buy a pressure canner. On the other hand, if your family is small and you have just a few surplus foods to store, another method of food preservation, such as freezing, may be more appropriate.

Another alternative is to borrow a canner, although this is not always feasible. Something that may be feasible though is to go shares with a very compatible friend in buying a large one and pool your resources and energies for canning bees.

A third alternative is to rent one, especially if you're thinking of purchasing but are still a little unsure. I have one available for that purpose. A rental fee of $1/day will be charged plus a $10 refundable damage deposit. The maximum rental period is for two days which can be renewed if the canner is not heavily booked. One guideline we've set though is that first time pressure canner users must undergo personal consultation with their District Home Economist prior to using the pressure canner. This can take place in the form of a home visit by the DHE, attending a food preservation workshop, or, for those with some prior experience, an off-site visit. For more information about renting the canner, phone me your District Home Economist, Alberta Agriculture in Drayton Valley at 542-5368.

You can also use a pressure canner for a boiling water bath if its inside height is four to five inches greater than the height of your tallest jars. Lay the lid on the rim but don't lock it. Pressure will start to build after about 10 minutes if it's locked, even with the vent open. Start timing when you hear a hard boil inside and steam vents strongly.

If you're a beginner and a bit leery of pressure canners, a good idea is to prepare the canner and take it through a practice run on your stove before processing any food in it.

Fiddle with the heat under the canner to determine how much is needed to hold the pressure steady for at least five minutes. Then, slide the canner off the heat, let the pressure fall back to zero, open the vent and remove cover, tilting away from you.

Pressure canners are nothing to be afraid of if you treat them with respect and follow the manufacturer's directions exactly; don't try shortcuts!

Judges look at function, design, craftsmanship at fairs

By Carlton C. Carrot

The sewing and handicrafts section of the local fair exhibit the work of many very talented residents.

Following are a few tips to help improve your exhibits.

In sewing and handicrafts the judge is looking at function, design and craftsmanship. Function refers to specific or intended use of the article. Design includes the shape and decoration of the article. Craftsmanship refers to the technical ability and skills of the craftsman.

Materials and textures and colors should be unity with function. For example, children's wear should be made of material that washes and wears well. Seam and hem finishes must be suitable for the article.

Facings for collars, necklines, etc. should not roll to the right side. Understitching, if used, should be neat and serve its purpose.

Handstitching, if used, should be even and neat.

Trims and topstitching should be accurately applied. The article should be clean and pressed.

In handicrafts the article should serve its intended purpose.

The design of the handicrafts will show individual-ty and creativity in the use of color and design.

Craftsmanship should show an appropriate use of materials (i.e. a serving tray will have a finish that does not mark or scratch easily).

The craftsman should use suitable finishing techniques; i.e. stitchery pictures will show off better if they are mounted and framed.

See you next week when we have a "bloomin' good time" discussing flowers. The fair is fast approaching.

Seats still available on BRTA Banff-Kananaskis tour

Seventy-five Battle River Tourist Association (BRTA) members met at the Niaki Inn recently for the regular monthly meeting.

In dealing with business from previous meetings, members were advised that support for the development of a Surface Mining Museum at Fowberry continues to come in from BRTA member communities. Support has also been very positive for the development of a museum and historical facilities related to the Imperial No. 1 Discovery Oil Well. The latter project is being spearheaded by the newly formed Ledue/Davon Historical Society.

With the 1987 promotional program well in hand the association is already formulating plans for 1988. Bids on printing the 1988 Battle River Country Visitors Guide were considered. Gospel Contact Press of Camrose got the nod to produce 40,000 guides for $15,700. It was decided to again leave the advertising rates exactly the same as in the previous seven years. Anyone interested in advertising in the '88 guide should contact BRTA immediately.

Under new business, Richard Holmes of Provost advised BRTA by letter that some persons believe a 12 kph (7.4 mph) speed limit should be placed on Dilberry Lake and as such Holmes requested from BRTA a letter of support to the cause to continue to allow boating and other water sports on Dilberry Lake. After considerable discussion the issue was tabled in order for BRTA to receive more information on the matter. Mr. Frank Eason, BRTA Representative to BRTA, offered some comments and offered to look into the matter.

Vera Engel of Killam presented a copy of the history "Halkirk Home Fires and Area" to BRTA President Jacobson for the association's historical library. Manager Sylvia Clemens advised that the Alaska Tour was most successful. She said that "many, many people across the Yukon and Alaska now know that Battle River Country, Zone 5 exists". While travelling, promotional literature and items were left enroute thus making the project a real promotion on wheels for the Zone 5 region. Based on the satisfaction of BRTA members who took the tour members moved that BRTA offer a 1988

Yukon/Alaska bus tour for BRTA members.

In regard to bus tours it was reported that a few seats are still available on the Great North Scenic Tour and the Banff-Kananaskis Tour both of which go in September. Details available from the BRTA office, phone 678-0050.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Alliance on August 20.

Courtesy needed to share the road..

The old proverb, "Share and share alike" is particularly appropriate when discussing motorists sharing the road with motorcycleists and bicyclist.

A little courtesy and a lot of attentiveness can go a long way to make motorists, motorcycleists and bicyclist "buddies" instead of adversaries on the road.

Make sure that you do not follow motorcycleists too closely. Stay at least two or three seconds behind them. This distance not only keeps you from invading a motorcycleist's "orb", it gives you valuable time to react to their reactions: perhaps a sudden stop, swerving to avoid a pothole or an uneven road surface or even an animal or pedestrian that darts out of nowhere.

To determine your correct following distance, pick a fixed point in the distance as a landmark and when the motorcycleist in front of you passes that landmark start counting the seconds. "One-one-thousand, two-one-thousand." If you are following at the correct distance, your vehicle should not pass the chosen landmark before you count to two seconds.

According to the Highway Traffic Act, a motorcycle is classed as a "Motor Vehicle". Legally, that classification means motorcycleists are entitled to the same lane width as a car. Don't attempt to pass a motorcycleist on the highway when travelling. Being aware is especially important in rainy, foggy weather when visibility is a problem. (Both for motorists and motorcyclists. Cutting in front of a motorcycleist in lashing rain may create a curtain of spray around them. While this may be a great stunt in a James Bond movie, it's a silly stunt in real life because it reduces a motorcycleist's visibility.

While on the topic of visibility, be sure you always shoulder check (in addition to looking in your rear view mirror) when changing lanes, turning, or driving out of a parking space. A motorcycle, bicycle or pedestrian may suddenly seem to come out of nowhere, straight into your path.

Don't open your car door without checking to see that there are no motorcycleists or bicyclist coming up behind you. In short, be aware of motorcycleists and cyclists

The total number of people killed and injured in Alberta in 1985 collisions in which a motorcycle was involved was 1181.

The 1985 Traffic Collision Statistics state that July and August were months recording the highest proportion of casualty crashes involving motorcycleists.

to be aware of motorcycleists and cyclists and to take extra caution on Alberta roadways, exercising a positive attitude towards two-wheeled travellers. "Share and share alike" is not only an admirable motto to live by, it's a safe motto to drive by.

"Share and share alike"

With these figures in mind, The Alberta Motor Association urges motorists
